Papers are invited from faculty members, scholars, students and other interested persons on the topic The Nineteenth Century : Construction and Deconstruction. The details of the seminar is as follows:

Concept Note

The nineteenth century was an era that saw an expansion of thought, resulting in considerable literary and cultural development. Social horizons widened as new ideas re-defined the pre-existing traditional society. Men and women became enlightened. Changes were evident in the domain of creative writing as well. It was a time when people were immensely affected by the spirit of patriotism and the zeal of nationalism that spread like wildfire across the country. Significant contributions were made in literature, philosophy, theology, science, statecraft, et al.

The nineteenth century elicits the interest of scholars even today. Parallel to attempts to reinterpret the literature, culture and society through a new lens, efforts have also been made to deconstruct the age simultaneously. One can envision the nineteenth-century anew, considering the several ways in which it can be constructed and deconstructed. The two-day international seminar is organized to glimpse the emerging perspectives.
